

Rosalind Franklin Prize for Excellence in Ovarian Cancer Research Nomination Guidelines 2022

Background

The Rosalind Franklin Prize is named for the molecular biologist Dr. Rosalind Franklin, who played a vital role in discovering the structure of DNA. Her life was cut short in 1958 when she died of ovarian cancer at age 37. Throughout her life she was a committed researcher; this prize is presented to a senior researcher who continues Franklin's legacy of excellence.

Purpose and Eligibility

The Rosalind Franklin Prize for Excellence in Ovarian Cancer Research is a $10,000 annual prize awarded to an individual in recognition of their outstanding contributions to basic science, translational, or clinical research in ovarian cancer. Nominees should have a track record of high achievement in the field of ovarian cancer research, as demonstrated by significant contributions to the care of women with gynecologic cancer and to the literature in the field, as well as having obtained significant extramural research funding. The prize rewards past achievement and provides further incentive for an outstanding working scientist to continue to do exceptional research into the causes, prevention, and treatment of ovarian cancer.

Nominees must hold an MD, PhD, or ScD degree, and must hold an academic appointment at a non-profit medical or research institution. A list of past prize winners is available online here.

Terms

The prize recipient will receive a one-time payment of $10,000. This prize is given to the individual and not their institution.

Selection

The prize is selected by a committee comprised of members of OCRA's Scientific Advisory Committee. Prize winners will be notified in December 2022.

Nomination Process

Nominations can be made by members of the ovarian cancer research community. To nominate someone for this prize, please submit the following as a single PDF:

1. A completed coversheet (see page two)
2. Letter of nomination (1,500 words or less). In the letter, please describe the nominee's achievements in the field of ovarian cancer research.
3. CV for the nominee.

Please submit the application material as a single PDF to grants@ocrahope.org
by 5:00 PM ET on Monday, October 31, 2022.
